

Cellular Telephone Use Aboard Airborne Aircraft Docket - 04-435

Absolutely not. Air travel is an uncomfortable enough experience at present without having to participate in the telephone conversations of inconsiderate fellow passengers. Experience on the Metro and in other public places indicates that the average cell phone user is totally oblivious of the volume of their conversation.